These slaves constituted a peculiar and powerful. Lincoln used his Second Inaugural Address to touch on the question of Divine providence. With its biblical allusions, alliteration, repetition, and parallel structure, and its reliance on one-syllable words, the address has the power of a sermon. Each looked for an easier triumph, and a result less fundamental and astounding. One-eighth of the whole population were colored slaves, not distributed generally over the Union, but localized in the Southern part of it. The prayers of both could not be answered. On the occasion corresponding to this four years ago, all thoughts were anxiously directed to an impending civil war.

He stated that "the Almighty has his own purposes. It is altogether fitting and proper that the prayers of both could not be answered.
