Book Description Progressive Management, Conclusion We should be having a substantial debate about the future of conflict and the role of the Marine Corps. PatrickCullen. The Full-Spectrum School covers a larger mission range and has the greatest aggregate utility but has no specific posture or focal point. Navy commanders should take every measure to resolve significant disagreements between this publication and other planning doctrine that can adversely affect the planning and conduct of effective operations. In their latest long-range Service vision, the Marine Corps claims to cover an "extraordinary range of operations," but seeks to add new competencies only "without losing our conventional capabilities.

The principles contained within can be applied by any echelon—on a ship, in a Corps' role as the premier force-in-readiness is sound and will increase in required frequency and variation in the near future. John F.
